With/in Floods

Mimmo Napolitano,
Letizia Artioli, Lorenzo Setti

Transdisciplinary panel talk and live concert as a single, continuous experience, where discourse and sound become two interconnected ways of navigating the same flooded terrain.

Artists, scientists, and practitioners from different disciplines will open the evening with a conversation on floods as both physical and socio-political events, addressing themes such as climate disruption, water as a rights-bearing entity, more-than-human perspectives, and the role of embodied and sonic knowledge in understanding ecological crisis.

This conversation will flow directly into a live performance from the collective EP WITH/IN FLOODS artscience frameworks, with Sale (ATOMI) AND Lullaby for Floods (LETIZIA Artioli) where live data, weather scans, field recordings, and sonic compositions transform spoken reflections into an immersive sonic-liquid environment. The audience is thus invited to shift from intellectual listening to embodied experience: to sense how floods dissolve boundaries between geographies, species, and temporalities, and how sound can become a medium for inhabiting uncertainty, turbulence, and the future possibility of ecological regeneration.
